Creating A Will

While almost all of the reasons for procrastinating are understandable, the absence of a will can have a devastating impact on an estate.

A valid will:

▪ must be signed by a person of legal age. In most states, this is age 18.
▪ must be the product of a person with full capacity to state their will.
▪ must have been created with full intent of taking effect at death.
▪ must be signed free of fraud, undue influence, duress or coercion.
▪ must be signed in front of witnesses (in most states).

These simple steps are required to constitute a valid will. It is strongly recommended that individuals consult their attorneys to ensure validity, and guard against anything that might delay the process of probating an estate. Your will is your opportunity to carefully articulate your wishes, your values and your legacy.
Four Reasons Americans Avoid Preparing a Will

1. TWO LITTLE PROPERTY TO MERIT A WILL
   It is easy for many Americans to look around and feel their estate is small and does not warrant the time and expense of a will.
   After all, the headlines always highlight multi-million dollar estates. The truth is that every day many people die possessing much more than they realize. What may be a modest home today, a small investment portfolio, or just the beginning of a savings account, can enjoy significant growth in value before death. Where no will exists, the state will determine distribution.

2. DISTASTE FOR LEGAL DOCUMENTS
   Many Americans seem to have a built-in distrust for legal documents that tend to be long and difficult to understand. A will is easily understood, however, when compared to the legal intricacies that an estate without a will may experience. Attorneys will gladly provide an easy-to-understand summary of the contents of a will to insure that your objectives are met.

3. A WILL IS COSTLY
   In many instances, a carefully prepared will does have some attendant costs. This is especially true where complicated or larger estates are involved.
   However, a few hundred dollars or more can pale in comparison to the cost of having no will at all. Without a will, an estate may face the maximum in applicable probate costs and taxes. In the event of any family disagreement over distribution, legal costs skyrocket. By the time settlement occurs, hundreds or even thousands of dollars might have been lost. In some cases, heirs can actually end up bearing the brunt of out-of-pocket costs. Having a will could even save you and your family money.

4. LIFE GETS IN THE WAY
   Finally, it is completely possible that the single biggest reason Americans fail to prepare a will falls into the "life just gets in the way" category. For some, it is simply the day-to-day routine that prohibits them from considering a will. For others, it is the reality that no one plans to die, or certainly no one enjoys planning to die. For another group, it may be rationalized under the "no one can know the future" reason, thinking that so much could change between today and the time of death. What good could it do to plan today?
